

Chris Graver

Freelance Dubbing Mixer

Chris is a naturally intuitive mixer who is equally at home finding fun sound effects for children's programmes as mixing longform complex drama. His 23 years at the BBC, first as a sound editor and then as a dubbing mixer and 9 years in the freelance world have given him a wide range of experience across many genres and a deep understanding of the role sound plays in enhancing the finished programme. Producers and directors alike appreciate his commitment to a programme and his passion for achieving the best possible result. Chris' background as a classically trained musician gives him a light, sensitive touch and discerning ear. He has been heavily involved in specifying and setting up three 5.1 dubbing theatres, a 5.1 prep room and, most recently, his own purpose built home studio. Chris has also given talks on 5.1 and Dolby E at Televisual and Broadcast Video Expo and is fully conversant with current loudness standards such as EBU R128.
